

JILI Multiplier Ladder Cheat Sheet

The climbing multiplier behind Fortune Gems and the sequels — how it steps, where it resets, why the bonus holds the big wins.

Many JILI titles quietly stack a multiplier behind the reels that climbs as you win and drops when the run ends. This cheat sheet pulls that ladder apart — how a rung applies to a win, why the reset is the whole balance of the mechanic, and why the tallest rungs almost always live inside the feature. It explains a mechanic, not a way to win; no mechanic removes the house edge. Reference material only, no real-money play involved.

01 What a ladder is

Instead of a fixed multiplier stamped on a win, the value steps up with each consecutive win and applies as it climbs. The effective win is the base symbol value times the current rung. The longer the unbroken run, the higher you climb.

02 The reset is the balance

The moment a spin fails to extend the sequence, the multiplier falls back to the bottom. The ladder is a streak bonus earned fresh each time, not a savings account that grows across a session.

03 Same idea, two tunings

Fortune Gems (medium, 2000x max) climbs gently for forgiving sessions; Fortune Gems 3 (high, 10125x max) pushes the ladder harder and rarer for a far taller ceiling. One mechanic, retuned for different appetites.

04 Why the ceiling lives in the feature

In the base game the multiplier rarely climbs far before a reset. Inside free spins, where respins come in sequence, the ladder has room to run — which is why a game's headline outcomes come from the bonus, not a single base spin.

05 Read it as a volatility signal

A tall advertised ceiling built on a ladder is a warning about swing, not a promise of a payout. Every spin is independent; the high rung you just reached does not make the next spin more likely to win.
